HONORS, PROFESSIONALLY SIGNIFICANT EXPERIENCE:

1965 Oct.	Certificat pratique de langue française , 1st degree, Sorbonne
1968-69	First student of the Univ. of Rochester to pursue full-time graduate study at the Seminar (doctoral) level at a German-speaking university: Vienna
1975 Fall	According to teacher-course evaluations , I had taught the best of 41 Freshman Seminars given that semester at Notre Dame. Theme: The Artist as Hero in the European Novel from Goethe to Gide, Joyce and Hesse. The following semester, this course ranked fourth among over forty sections.
1979 Summer	Certificat : completion of three courses: grammar, composition, explication de texte , within the framework of the Cours de Civilisation française , University of Paris, Sorbonne
2003 Fall	According to teacher-course evaluations , I tied with another professor for the highest score in teaching the Core Course; there were 45 sections
2003-07	Fellow, Nanovic Institute for European Studies
2006 Spring	John Kaneb Award for Excellence in Teaching, ND, stipend $1,000

CSEM 23101-06 “Self-Definition and the Quest for Happiness” taught in the Fall of 2007 proved so successful that these sophomores, led by the initiative of Courtney Isaak, requested that I teach them again as seniors. Though judging by the written evaluations, I realized the Self-Definition course had fulfilled a need, I could not have anticipated Courtney’s request nor that she would take the trouble to solicit testimonials from her classmates over the summer of 2008 in order to realize her goal. The “Evil and the Lie in Modern European Prose” seminar, offered the spring of 2010, will always rank as one of the highlights of my teaching career.

Hilary Szczepanski, one of our senior German majors, attempted to replicate Courtney Isaak’s achievement, but due to insurmountable departmental scheduling conflicts concerning the spring of 2012, her wish could not be fulfilled.

- 2012 Spring Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, C. S. C. Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching, ND, stipend $1,500.
- 2013 Fall Institute for Scholarship in the Liberal Arts, copyediting grant: $1200.
